The challenge of the turbulent rivers is no less than that of the rugged mountains. The icy heights of the Himalayas are the source of some of India's mighty rivers, fed by innumerable streams they race along tortuous boulder strewn beds, cutting deep gorges and breaking into silvery white rapids.

Sacred river Ganga in Garhwal region offers professionals as well as amateurs, the exhilaration of white water rafting. Alaknanda and Bhagirathi are the main tributaries of the Ganga and meet at Devprayag, frothing from their racy descent their waters are of Grade IV to V, challenging the expert to savour the thrill. Down river from Devprayag, the Ganga changes into a pool drop river. This stretch of almost 70 kms is perfect for the amateurs, as here the river offers some fine Grade III rapids and two Grade IV rapids, the 'WALL' at Byasi and the 'GOLF COURSE', 4 km below Shivpuri village each followed by deep & placid pools.

ASAN CONSERVATION ACTIVITIES

Asan Conservation Reserve, or Asan barrage, is a stunning blue-green water body, around 43 km from Dehradun. One of the region's most popular bird-watching sites, nature-lovers and birding enthusiasts can be seen training their lenses on winged beauties here. Located in the Dehradun district, this serene natural expanse sits at the picturesque junction of the Yamuna and Asan rivers. India's first conservation reserve, established in 2005, it recently became Uttarakhand's first Ramsar site, making it a 'Wetland of International Importance'. Spread over 4.5 sq km, Asan is also listed as an Important Bird Area (BNHS and BirdLife International) and is popular for sightings of native and migratory birds. Asan receives about 40 migratory bird species, including ruddy shelduck, common coot, gadwall, kingfisher, Indian cormorant, baer's pochard, northern pintail, bar-headed goose, among others. It is one of the most well-known sites for congregations of brahminy ducks. The best bird-watching season here is winter, from November to February. There are demarcated routes inside the reserve for tourists and nature-lovers. Eco-huts have also been set up in the area.

When to visit

While it's an all-year-round destination, the best season to watch birds is from October to April.

The GMVN water sports complex here offers facilities for paddle boating,

Timing for boating- Sunrise to Sun set

Season for boating- 15 Oct. to 14 June

Close for boating – 15 Jun to 14 Oct

Rates for Boating

4 Seater Paddle Boat – 300.00 (Including GST) – Time - 30 Minutes
